The star of the north

The star of the north
will be brought by the starry sky but before a sail will appear out of the open sea I'll grow into wave and fire in order to embrace you, foreign land

And you, my lost, distant homeland will be a caress and a wound as the dawn will break in another land

I'm now flying towards my life's celebration I'm now flying towards my joy's feast

My old moons
my new birds chase the sun and the day away from the mountain so that you watch me go by like lightning in the sky.
